NOTES & RECOMMENDATIONS

Most vets advise that dogs are not neutered until they are over a year/18months for large breeds. This means that it is crucial that they are able to socialise suitably. It is the owners responsibility to teach their dogs manners - If they're being over friendly when the other dog is not reciprocating or looking uncomfortable the owners need to be looking at their management instead; ie; saying they cannot interact until they are calm, must have a long line on for easy retrieval away from play.

No putting fearful dogs into the meets as it can lead to unwanted behaviours unless the owner is knowledgeable.

Putting a fearful dog in a situation with loads of other dogs can be extremely overwhelming and result in reactivity. It be advised to start them at a distance and make sure they (and puppies) are with calm dogs not other puppies as you need older well rounded dogs to help teach doggy manners - owners can only do so much and puppies will tend to build bolshy behaviours (which is what I am seeing with intact males)

Any dog that is not trained or doesn't have solid training is required to stay on a longline.

For behaviour; owners should be knowledgeable & know when play/behaviour is inappropriate/stressed etc

9/10 people miss stress signals and/or read play wrong and this is when issues arise between dogs!
