

Rivers and Wetlands Community Days

Project Summary

Harrow's water bodies range from clean to highly degraded. Invasive species such as Himalayan Balsam crowd out native plants and cause bank erosion, while misconnections and deliberate dumping cause considerable pollution.

The ongoing Harrow Council Yeading Brook Unbound project, funded by ReWild London, is funding major watercourse improvements on the currently poor Yeading Brook West, while Harrow Nature Conservation Forum's Better Water For Wetlands project, funded by the Crane River Partnership, is investigating sources of pollution on the Yeading Brook East.

However, without regular sampling of aquatic invertebrates we will not know whether these schemes have been successful in improving these streams.

We will empower existing volunteer groups and recruit new volunteers to:

- Map and tackle invasive plants.
- Commence Riverfly water quality monitoring at 6 new sites, evidencing improvements from above projects.
- Make regular quantitative measurements of ammonia and phosphate.
- Gain proficiency in aquatic/marginal plant and invertebrate identification
- Survey and assess local waterbodies, reporting species records to local and national databases.
- Undertake eDNA survey of 10 flagship ponds for Great Crested Newt
- Organize 12 public events to increase awareness of Harrow's ponds and rivers,
- pollution and other problems and engage new supporters.
- Generate and distribute online and printed publicity material to engage local communities.
